

Jens Burenstam is a 29 year old man who was born, raised and lives in Jönköping, Sweden. Jens is working as a forklift driver in a warehouse a short trip outside of town, a work which he loves.

Every month Jens will have a few weekend shifts and also a few night shifts, so the pay is really good. The extra shifts is not an issue for Jens, as he is currently living alone. On the contrary, Jens has some really good friends at work with whom he can have fun and joke about anything with, as they all have the same humor and interests. It's a fairly easy going job, the boss is "a nice guy" and there is rarely any stress. For Jens, work has become a natural part of life which he is looking forward to every day.

The friendship with his colleagues does not end with the shift, but instead they often hang out outside of working hours as well. If they have the same shift they often go out for a beer at the favorite bar to just chill out and have a chat. Otherwise they often play games and talk over the internet. Apart from that they try to bring together a few more people and have a LAN every once in a while.

Although the shifts also has it's drawbacks. Jens and his friends often have different shifts, thus Jens often end up alone at the computer whereas his friends either is at work, sleeping or spending time with their special someone. Because this is Jens' favorite hobby, playing computer games. When Jens was still a kid he loved books, especially fantasy books, and the longer the better. He would often go to the school library, borrow some books and read them in a day or two, upon which he would borrow more books and read them as well. He loved to really feel that he was living in the story and he could continue reading for hours and hours and wished that the books he read would never end, thus long series were a favourite. Although his interest for books was transformed when he first encountered computer games in secondary school when visiting a friend.

Computer games was everything he ever dreamt of through the books in his younger years. Finally he could really live the story, become a part of it and decide its outcome. Just like with books for Jens the important part is the journey, not the goal.

When playing games with his friends Jens is rarely the one who strive to be the one and only winner, he prefers to experience the game and have fun playing it. But as always when playing with friends it's fun to win every now and again. When playing by himself Jens either play one of two kinds of games, the long story driven game with a deep setting which he can go on playing for hours and hours, or the more light hearted game which he can pick up and play for a few minutes, either just before work, or while waiting for a friend to come online.

As a kid Jens wanted to becoming an author, writing down all those stories spinning around his head, although a lack of motivation and encouragement, both personal and from his parents, has made him give this up and is now just living his life day by day with no real goal in sight, nor any dreams to speak of.